No business can thrive without a website. But the best site in the world won't help your business unless you learn how to increase web traffic to your site. There are a variety of strategies for increasing web traffic, but the only way to succeed is to use a combination of all the best techniques. Using them together, the whole strategy is greater than the sum of its parts.

You should know up front that the process is time consuming if you want to do it right. And like most things in life, it is not worth doing if you are not going to do it right. Remember, there are other people out there with similar websites and they are working hard for the same traffic. Let's look at some of the methods used to increase web traffic.

Placing ads is one easy method to generate traffic for your site. It is easy, but it is not guaranteed successful. The success of the advertisements will depend in part on how you do it. You do not necessarily want to spend a lot of money; it is better to spend it the right way. If you are buying ads, make sure to target your advertising dollars. Make sure that your ads are placed on sites that would be frequented by the type of people who would also be interested in your products.

Use attention getting copy in your ads, not the same headlines that everyone is using. It can be tough to come up with original copy that will stand out among everything else out there. If you are struggling for ideas and creative hooks, you may want to consider hiring a professional copywriter to do ads for you. You can also hire a service that will place effective ads as part of a comprehensive campaign.

A good writer knows how to tease the reader with just enough information to make them follow the link to find out more. Don't offer enough and the reader will pass it by. Tell them too much and they won't have any reason to click through to your page. Striking this balance takes practice and that is why a professional is often worth the money.

If your ads are effective and people click through to your page, what are they going to find? The answer to this will directly affect the amount of traffic you get. If there is nothing worth staying on your site to read, then web users will surf on. Also if the information on the website does not match what the customer expects to see, then they will not stay. That is why it is important that you make sure your ads are accurate. Because the wrong kind of web traffic is no better than no traffic at all.

After you have already developed a high level of traffic, your own content will bring in traffic. Until you get to that level, you need to extend your reach to find more customers. One proven record is through submitting articles to article directories like www.ezinearticles.com. You can submit as many articles as you want and have them linked back to your own site. These articles will come up in people's searches and will lead them to your site.

The secret to having good articles linked to your site is to make sure that they are written properly by someone with a good knowledge of SEO writing. SEO is search engine optimization and it is a way to make a page appear in the top of the search engine results page. Keywords are important in SEO so you need to determine what the most effective keywords for your market are. You can do this by researching on the popular search engine sites like Google and Yahoo and see what keywords popular sites are using.

If you do not have time to do the research, then it may be cost effective for you to pay a professional to do this work for you. They will know the best keywords to use so they will be able to accomplish the task quite a bit faster so the cost will not be too high. And any money you spend will be an investment in your site that will be paid back many times over by the increased traffic that it will generate.

Another way to increase traffic to your site is to spread the word through social networking sites like MySpace and Facebook and through internet forums based on topics related to your site. This technique will not cost you any money other than your time. If you do it correctly it can be quite effective. Be careful not to sell your site too forcefully in these environments however, because that is not what people come to those sites for and they may be turned off by the hard sell.
